

Data Dictionary

Term	Definition
Book Title	The name chosen for the book by its author. It is typically used to identify the book. However, multiple books may have the same book title.
Author	The creator or originator of the written book. An author may have written several published books.
Abstract	A short piece of writing that serves as description of the book, often located at the back of the book. The purpose of the abstract is to give the reader a quick promotional summary of the book.
ISBN	International Standard Book Number, or ISBN, is an international standard identification number to uniquely identify books. No two books will have the same ISBN number.
Publisher	The company that is responsible for the publishing of the book, making it available to the public for sale or for free.
Genre	A style or category of a book, involving a set of characteristics. Each book may belong to one or more genres.
Subject	A branch of knowledge that wholly represents the contents of a book. Each book may have one or more subjects.